We, the Free Software Foundation, use the GNU General Public License for most of our software; it applies also to any other work released this way by its author. You can apply it to your programs, too. When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public License does not require free vendors to accept any legal terms for free software. To make sure that you have the freedom to distribute, use, modify, and sell modified or unmodified versions of the Program, you must satisfy the terms of this License, which contains our General Public License. If a program does not meet this License, it is your choice whether it remains free or not; neither the Program, nor any derivative work of it, may be distributed under the terms of any other license.
