What's new in Operation FS Scenario Advanced Fog Of War In The Pacific:

Logistics Simulator is a children's cardboard box game by Hazel Kunzli and Jane Macdonald that explores the industrial revolution, transportation, production, and consumption of resources within a closed environment. The conceptual design uses game mechanics, symbolism, and a construction toy to allow up to three players to take on roles of a factory owner, resident, and transportation - track driver - of a factory that provides goods to surrounding industrialized towns. The design was developed to aid in Matt and I's approach to creating a soundtrack for a marketing campaign for the game. As part of the packaging, Logistics Simulator Soundtrack was included. After studying the game packet and the sound design inside the box, Matt and I agreed that the first half of Logistics Simulator would be a good space to support an industrial score by exploring anxiety, pessimism, mockery, and theatricality, particularly given the elements of a play that we might see in the first half. We decided to test two tools that could be applied to a project of this type. Eric Bettendorf, composer of Havazurand co-creator of the Tectonic Soundsystem Sarah Goist, composer of Omnes! The Music of Love & Joy and co-creator of The Quiettones Submissions were received from each collaborator on a theme of "spaces". The themes were used to inform the listening setup and strategy. In our approach to the project, we attempted to be open to surprise and both decided to take a risk-but-engineered approach, resulting in more songs being written and submitted than we had originally anticipated. In this set, we share a summary of each track by the composer as well as tell you a bit about how it was constructed, the choice of sounds, and the overall aesthetic. Resources Each of the collaborators submitted two composer-led tracks. • Eric Bettendorf "Space is Empty Place is Creation" Eric commented: The basic concept of this track is based in my experience moving the second time between Los Angeles and New York. In the first time I traveled I stayed in my brother's company's house. It was quite tedious and it was with the exchange rate, 8 Euro/USD at the time, that I had to work a full day

"Gatatsui no Kara" was released as a spin off from the storyline presented in Haru to Shura. Using the track collection from that game, a new set of orchestrated BGM will be delivered. The concept behind the game was by the artist Junpei Shirota, who was part of Haru to Shura. The music theme in the game is about the experience of being in the city.
