In my earlier post I've shown simple example on how to use Aspose.Words to extract date/time from all tables in xlsx file. In this post I want to show what we can do if we need extract text from all cells in a range (like A1:A20) instead of a particular table in a file. In my code example I will use C#, but I hope my coding tips will be useful for other programming languages as well. Before we can start extracting text from a range we need to understand on which object we will work in our example. We will use Range object to describe range we want to extract text from. To do that first you need to use Document object to get hold of Excel Document and then you need to find Range object from your Document. Range object represents Excel cells that can contain text. So here is our object: `Document doc = new Document(@"c:\test.xlsx");` `Range range = doc.Range;` Now we can start looking for text. When we need to find text we first need to search for Start/End position of cell range and then we use Cell object to read the text from a cell. Note that we can get line number for a cell with RowNumber property of Cell. `range.Start.Row = 1; string s = range.Cell[RowNumber,ColumnNumber].Text;` Now that we know how to search for text, we can gather all cells into a DataTable and then we can loop through all cells. In my example I will add one more column to my DataTable so I can store new text, StartPosition and EndPosition values. To do that I will add new column "Data" with string type. Add Column "Data" Table.Columns.Add("Data", typeof(string));

Now it is
